—The reason why in so many cases hens fail to lay well in winter and warm weather is that they need plenty of green food. It cannot take the place of grain, as it is of low value, but as an adjunct to the grain ration and to keep the fowls healthy, a plentiful supply, both in Summer and Winter, is necessary. Beat leaves, turnip and carrot tops are also good in Summer, but nothing seems to be relished as much as lettuce.

AMUSEMENTS.

"A MODERN MAGDALEN."

Thrilling with human interest is the description given Haddon Chambers' play, "A Modern Magdalen," which will be presented here Wednesday night by the Amalia Bingham special company. Enjoying a three-months' run at the Bijou Theatre, New York, to a discussion of crowded houses, this drama created the wide spread discussion of crowded houses, and its powerful presentation left an impression among discerning theatre-goers that has spread broadcast over the country. "A Modern Magdalen" is said to be a play in which the deeper passions are touched upon and is replete with intense and passionate scenes that enthrall the auditor, surfeited with the "book made" play and the flimsy and cheaply constructed melodramatic material which has lately inundated the country. Nothing has been left undone in the point of production and accessories, and the scenery and properties are tastefully and ornately executed, and the feminine contingent will no doubt be pleased in the marvelous display of gowns by the ladies of the company.

—The curtain will rise at the performance of a "Modern Magdalen," at the Opera House, to-morrow night, after the wedding, thus affording all to see the splendid show.

—HERALD SQUARE STOCK CO.

—The Herald Square Stock Company will be seen at the Grand Opera House, in this city, for three nights and a matinee, beginning on Thursday night, next The Danville, Ky., Courier, in speaking of a performance given by this company, on Nov. 14th, says: "The Herald Square Stock Company opened with a weeks engagement at the opera house Monday night to a good sized audience. The show seems to be making a good impression if liberal applause has anything to do with it. The specialties which are features of the show are good. In illustrated songs Mr. Harrison is a winner, being compelled to respond to several encores every night. McEnroe and LaPorte are out of the ordinary with their clog and fancy dancing and Prof. Ritter with his moving picture machine is a special feature. His views are the most distinct and artistically colored that has been shown in this city."

TAKING TESTIMONY.

The Coal Strike Commission Sitting As a Court.

There Are No Less Than 30 Attorneys, 24 of Whom Are Looking After the Interests of the Mine Owners.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 15.—The anthracite coal strike commission appointed by President Roosevelt to arbitrate the differences existing between the mine workers of the hard coal fields of Pennsylvania and their employers, Friday began the hearing of testimony by which it will determine whether or not the workmen are receiving fair and just wages for their labor and whether their conditions should not be improved. The star witness for the miners, President John Mitchell, took the stand in the forenoon and when the commission adjourned at 4 o'clock in the afternoon he was still under the fire of cross examination by David W. Willcox, general counsel of the Delaware & Hudson Co. It was a trying day for the miners' leader, but he seemed to stand the test well. The heaviest fire of cross questions was aimed at him late in the afternoon session and when the hour of adjournment was reached Mr. Willcox was still propounding questions and testing Mr. Mitchell's memory.

The opening of the sessions was a notable day in the annals of the law in the upper anthracite regions. Such an array of lawyers has never been seen in this part of the state, and it is doubtful whether attorneys have ever been so numerous on one side of a case in this state as were present in the interests of coal companies Friday. The commission's sessions are being held in the room of the Pennsylvania supreme court, which is now sitting in Philadelphia. Ranged around three tables in front of the seven commissioners who occupied judge's bench, were no less than 30 lawyers, 24 of whom were looking after the interests of the mine owners.

In addition to these there was a large number of members of the bar present who came to merely look on. The court room at both sections was packed almost to suffocation, and scores of persons were unable to gain admittance.

Grouped about Mr. Mitchell were District Presidents Nicholls, Duffy and Fahy, the three district secretaries, the three national board members and the members of the three district legislative boards of the anthracite field. Scattered through the spectators were many practical miners who will be called upon to take the stand in behalf of the miners.

During the day Attorney Willcox asked Mr. Mitchell many questions as to the policies of the union, the method of calling strikes, the ability of the union to maintain discipline and prevent the members of the union from violating the law, and also as to the liability of the union breaking contracts. It was apparent to many of those present, who understood the situation, that Mr. Willcox's object was to attempt to prove by Mr. Mitchell's own testimony that the contention of the companies that the miners' union was an irresponsible organization was well founded, and that trade agreements therefore could not be safely entered into with the union.

During the hearing the statements were brought out for the first time since the late strike was begun that the union had disbursed $1,500,000 among the union and non-union men who were on strike.

MRS. M'KINLEY'S MINE.

The First Carload of Zinc Ore Ever Mined in Illinois Shipped.

Metropolis, Ill., Nov. 15.—The Empire lead lands and spar mines on the Illinois Central railway in Pope county have just shipped the first carload of zinc ore ever mined in Illinois. This mine is on land owned by Mrs. William McKinley, widow of the president, and was operated by the Saxtons for several years after the civil war for spar and lead. But so much carbonate of zinc was found that the mines were finally abandoned, the value of the brown colored ore not being known. Recently operations were resumed by an Ohio man.

Believe They Were Drowned.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Two weeks ago James A. Waters and Miss Kitty McLaughlin, both of this city, went driving and as they did not return it was supposed they had eloped. Friday, however, the horse and wagon they used was found in the Hudson river here and it is now believed the young couple were drowned. The theory is that the horse ran away and dashed into the river.

FOREIGN POSTAGE.

Radical Reduction in the Rates to Be Urged Upon Congress.

Washington, Nov. 15.—A radical reduction of the postage rates of mail to the leading commercial nations of Europe will be urged on congress at this session by Postmaster General Payne. It is confidently expected that in case the project is carried through to successful execution our foreign trade will be greatly stimulated. It is believed that the nations who are to be approached with a view to being parties to the arrangement will readily give their acquiescence.

The plan will be proposed in Mr. Payne's annual report. The present rate is five cents per half ounce on letters to foreign countries, save Canada and Mexico, between which and this country the same postage rates are applied as are imposed on mail within this country. It is proposed to put the governments of England, Germany and France on the same footing. In view of the greatly increased volume of postal business and the number of commercial transactions between this country and Europe the foreign rate is held to be entirely disproportionate to the domestic rate and serves as a detriment to the business interests of the country. Mr. Payne believes a reduction in postal rates not only would prove a great benefit to the business interests of the country, but result in sufficiently large business to make up in the end for the loss of revenue.

This has been the experience of the United States in the reciprocal arrangements made with the two countries on our northern and southern borders. The project will have to be carried through by conventions with the other countries mentioned. So soon as the assent of congress is secured, Germany, England and France will be approached and conventions with other countries along the same lines will be left for the future consideration.

MILLIONAIRE SENTENCED.

Edward Butler Gets Three Years in the Penitentiary.

Columbia, Mo., Nov. 15.—The jury in the case of Edward Butler, "the honest blacksmith," millionaire St. Louis politician and democratic boss, charged with attempting to bribe two members of the St. Louis board of health, returned a verdict Friday morning. It was "Guilty," and assessed the punishment at imprisonment in the pen for three years. The defendant's countenance changed only for a moment.

Mrs. Edward Butler and her daughter-in-law seemed crushed. The aged helpmeet of Col. Butler bowed her head and her bosom rose and fell, in indicative of the intense pain she felt. She left the courtroom soon after the verdict was read. Butler's attorney will ask for a new trial.

PARLOR MATCHES.

The Sale and Storage of Them to Be Stopped in New York.

New York, Nov. 15.—Fire department officials of this city have decided to stop the sale of parlor matches in Greater New York. They have given warning that after January 1 no permits for the storage or sale of matches (except the sulphur variety) which can not be ignited on other than a prepared surface, will be issued by the bureau of combustibles. This notice is the beginning of an effort to enforce an ordinance adopted some time ago. According to Inspector Murry, of the bureau mentioned, 1,300 fires last year, which cost eight lives, were traced to parlor matches.

STORM OF RED DUST.

Balls of Flame Fell and Set Fire to Several Buildings in Melbourne.

London, Nov. 15.—According to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Sydney, N. S. W., an extraordinary red dust storm has been experienced in Victoria and New South Wales. Darkness enshrouded the city of Melbourne at noon and balls of flame fell and set fire to several buildings. The people were thrown into a state of panic as they thought the world was coming to an end. A similar cloud of red dust hung like a pall over the city of Sydney and many inland towns Thursday.

SHOT AT KING LEOPOLD

Attempt to Assassinate the Ruler of Belgium.

The Would-Be Assassin Is An Italian Anarchist Named Gennero Rubino, Who Was Arrested.—The King Was Not Injured.

Brussels, Nov. 17.—An anarchist, named Rubino, made an attempt to assassinate Leopold, king of Belgium. He is an Italian, and made the attempt while the king was proceeding to the cathedral to attend a requiem in memory of the late Queen Marie Henrietta. No one was hurt.

Rubino stood in front of the bank of Brussels, on the Rue Royale. The other chambers in the revolver proved to be blank. The man was immediately arrested, and the police had some difficulty in rescuing him from the hands of the crowd.

That Rubino intended to assassinate King Leopold seemed fully established Saturday evening by the prisoner's confession to the police. The latter at first denied all the reports to the effect that the revolver contained ball cartridges, or that Rubino was connected with anarchism. But they finally admitted that the prisoner had confessed that he intended to shoot King Leopold, and that he had anarchistic beliefs.

According to some reports Rubino, in the course of his examination before the magistrate, declared that he selected King Leopold for his attack, on account of his majesty's inhuman conduct towards his daughter, Princess Stephanie, at the time of her mother's death, and he also wished to show to the anarchists in London who doubted his loyalty that while they only talked, he acted. He would have killed King Edward, he added, but for the strong feeling of the English people in favor of the monarch.

The ministry of the interior has established the identity of the assailant of King Leopold. His name is Gennero Rubino and he is described in their records as an advanced socialist. He was condemned to a long term of imprisonment for stealing at Milan in 1893, but he effected his escape to England, where he is supposed to have imbibed his anarchist principles.

It appears that Rubino has a brother who is also an anarchist. His father fought with distinction in the Italian war for independence.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Secretary Hay called at the Belgian legation Sunday to express to the officials there the regret over the attempt on the life of the king of Belgium Saturday and to extend the congratulations of the people of this country over the king's escape from harm.

THE NATIONAL GRANGE.

The Establishment of Rural Loan and Trust Companies Advocated.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 17.—Impressive exercises were held by the National Grange in Representative hall Sunday in memory of the members of that body who have died in the past year. Aaron Jones, master of the grange, at Sunday's session, severely scored what he termed the most gigantic of all monopolies, the proposed bankers' trust. He advocated the establishing of rural loan and trust companies, the growth of which in Indiana, he says, has been phenomenal in the last two years.

BATTLE OF FORT WASHINGTON.

Services Held in New York Commemorative of the Event.

New York, Nov. 17.—In "The Little Church at the Old Fort," officially known as the "Holy Rood Protestant Episcopal Church," which is situated on the site of the battle of Fort Washington, services were held Sunday commemorative of the battle. Among the societies represented at the services were the Empire State society, Sons of the American Revolution, the Mary Washington Chapter, Daughter of the American Revolution and the American Scenic and Historic Preservation society. Various revolutionary relics, dug up in the vicinity, were displayed in the chapter room of the church.

A $100,000 Fire in New York.

New York, Nov. 17.—Fire Sunday night completely gutted the buildings at 286 to 292 Graham street, Brooklyn, entailing a loss of $100,000. New York, Nov. 17.—Dread of being summoned to answer a charge of roughly treating one of the children of her class is supposed to have been the cause of the suicide of Miss Celia Ettleson, a public school teacher, Sunday.

Secretary Wilson Ill.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Secretary Wilson is confined to his home by a severe neuralgia cold which has developed since the recent political campaign in which the secretary took an active part.

THE AMERICAN ARMY.

Annual Report of Inspector General Breckinridge.

Washington, Nov. 17.—The annual report of Gen. J. C. Breckinridge, inspector general of the army, is a voluminous document and covers every phase of the military establishment and each department bureau and command in the army. There is more than fifty recommendations and suggestions relating to improvements in the army, most of which pertain to technical matters and minor conditions. Much of the report necessarily has been covered in the reports of bureau chiefs and commanding officers. General Breckinridge finds much to commend in all branches of the service and reports progress and improvements everywhere.

The most serious criticism is in regard to absenteeism where officers are on detached duty leaving the regiments short of officers. Thus, in the Philippines especially, it is found that many companies are without captains, and the companies in command of new and untried officers. He attributes this to lack of officers in the army to fill the details and detached assignments.

Gen. Breckinridge shows that instruction in the army is progressing satisfactorily. He recommends the fortification of Pearl Harbor, in the Hawaiian islands, as a strategic point. He says water transportation in the army is rapidly assuming stable and economical methods.

He has the following to say regarding his inspection in the Philippines.

"During my tour in the Philippines it was evident on all sides that the army, as a whole, was laboring patiently and faithfully to solve the many vexing problems continually presented to it. The difficulties encountered and the hardships endured never can be fully appreciated by any one who has not been on the ground and observed the daily life of officers and men, miles away from home, influences and associations, living in communities either openly or secretly hostile, depending almost entirely for their subsistence upon the commissary—where one is almost afraid to take even an ordinary drink of water without ascertaining first whether it has been cooked."

SHIPWRECKED CREW.

Hardships of the Survivors of the Steamer Ellingamite Disaster.

London, Nov. 17.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Wellington, New Zealand, telegraphs that the eight survivors from the wreck of the British steamer Ellingamite, who were rescued on a raft by the British survey steamer Penguin, went through a dreadful experience. The raft from which they were taken measured only 12 feet long by seven feet wide, and had 16 persons on it when it left the wreck. The only food on board was two apples. The first apple was consumed on Tuesday and the second on Wednesday, each being divided into 16 portions.

From Sunday, the day they were wrecked, until Thursday, when they were rescued the survivors drifted 60 miles on the half-submerged raft. Several attempts were made to land on the Three King's Islands, but without success. Three men died on Monday night from drinking salt water. All of the survivors suffered the tortures of thirst, and four other men and the stewardess died of exhaustion before they were picked up by the Penguin. They had a cruel disappointment on Tuesday night. A steamer was sighted in the distance and frantic shouts were raised by those on the raft to attract attention. The steamer lowered a boat which passed within 50 yards of them but the boat's crew apparently did not see the raft and returned to their vessel.

When the Penguin was sighted only one of the survivors was able to stand, and all were terribly emaciated.

COLLISION IN CHICAGO.

One Man Killed and a Dozen Persons More or Less Hurt.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—One man was killed and a dozen men, women and children more or less seriously injured in a collision Sunday night between a Western avenue electric car and a freight car, Burlington and Quincy freight train at the Eighteenth street crossing. The motor and trailer, which made up the electric train, was crowded with passengers, and it seems a miracle that so many escaped instant death. A mistake of the flagman at the crossing was responsible for the accident. The flagman and men in charge of the street car have been placed under arrest.

Suicided By Shooting.

Dawson, Ga., Nov. 17.—Lavoyser Lamar, a merchant of this place, aged 27, and related to the Lamar family of Georgia committed suicide Sunday night by shooting himself with a pistol on a railroad track and allowing a train to run over his body. During the evening he entered the Methodist church and bade the pastor good-bye, telling him he hoped he would not be permitted to speak ill of him.

On Leave of Absence.

Copenhagen, Nov. 17.—Ambassador Juserand and his wife, who is an American, left for Paris, where they intend to spend the New Year. They will proceed thence to Washington, where they expect to arrive in January.

Granted Increase of Pay.

Denver, Col., Nov. 17.—Under an agreement reached the men employed as switchmen in the various yards of the Rio Grande system are granted an increase in pay, based on the Chicago schedule recently adopted.

DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Armour & Co.'s Packing Plant Went Up in Smoke.

The Loss Is Partly Covered By $721,500 Insurance—Six Hundred Men Are Thrown Out of Work By the Fire.

Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 17.—Armour & Co.'s packing plant, which occupied four acres of the stock yards, and valued at $900,000, was totally destroyed early Sunday morning by a fire which started on the second floor of the fertilizer building and is thought by Manager Lemon to have been due either to spontaneous combustion or to an imperfect dryer. The loss is partly covered by $721,500 insurance. Six hundred men are thrown out of employment by the fire.

Within an hour after the fire was discovered by a watchman six streams of water were being thrown upon the fire, which was gutting the fertilizer building, which was 120 by 60 feet and four stories high, but the pressure was inadequate.

The floors and contents of the building burned like chaff. The roof soon fell and the fire burst through into the beef killing house. At the same time the cattle chute ignited, and in five minutes fell with a crash.

Once in the beef killing house, the flames began to dance madly. From this house to the oleo building was only a step, and when the oils started to burn the fire presented a most spectacular appearance. The big beef house, containing 500 carcasses, was the next to take fire, and the whole plant, except the hog house, was a lake of fire. The roar was terrible. The country for miles around was lighted up. Suddenly there was a terrific detonation followed quickly by another, and then another. Twenty-four drums of 100 pounds of ammonia each exploded before the reserve supply in the ammonia cistern was reached. That explosion almost razed the entire plant.

The flames were blown through the fire wall which separated the hog house from the other buildings. Steadily the fire crept against the wind and through the office building. Not a scrap of paper was saved.

When the last of the ammonia drums was going off a burning chute fell upon a bunch of live hogs and their squeals were added to the appalling chorus.

THE CHOLERA IN MANILA.

The Spread of the Disease Is Causing Some Alarm.

Manila, Nov. 17.—The number of cholera cases is increasing in this city and the spread of the disease is causing some alarm. There are on an average 30 cases daily. The Funston reserve hospital, the casual camp at Santa Mesa and Rillbid prison are now included among the places infected. The disease is spreading in the Marquina valley where the danger of an infection of the water supply is regarded as grave. Should the water supply become infected a general epidemic is considered inevitable.

The cholera reports from the provinces show a decrease in the number of cases.

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the street, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not, is responsible for the payment of the subscription price. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post office, or removing them from the carrier's hands, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

COMPARISON OF CONDITIONS.

I used to get disgruntled-like toward Pollock on the Crick.
I thought that luck had served me an uncommon low-down trick;
I'd heard about how splendid European monarchs are,
I thought to be a monarch, an' especially a czar.

But now I'm gettin' wiser, an' I say it loud and plain,
That I like this ol' spring wagon better than an armored train;
An' this here faithful hat o' mine, whose trim is breakin' down,
Gives me a heap more comfort than a fourteen-karat crown.

I'd hate to wear a suit o' mall; they've gone clean out o' style.
It's tough to do your dressin' with a monkey wrench and file.
An' when our new alarm clock hadn't been adjusted right,
An' went off unexpected, why, I'd simply die of fright.

An' them courtly ceremonies which a sovereign enjoys,
They'd leave no time at all for swappin' horses with the boys,
Nor sittin' here upon the fence an' whittlin' of a stick—
I bet the czar 'ud like to live at Pollock on the Crick.

Jobbs was pursuing his way, looking neither to right nor left. Job, slinking along in the shadows, watched him until they arrived in this way at the end of the block. Perhaps, after all, his suspicions of Jobbs were unjust. He hoped they were, but he felt that he could not be too careful to ward off any attempt at treachery. Then he noticed what was a peculiar sight in that shabby neighborhood, a black coupe drawn up near the street lamp on the corner.

"Ho! ho! Could he have come in a carriage?" muttered Job to himself. "This is getting to be interesting."
His visitor had reached the corner, and paused there for a moment, looking up and down the street. Then, out of the coupe stepped a man, who, walking forward, laid his hand on Jobbs' shoulder. The latter started with a violent gesture, but presently calmed down, and they stood there for some moments in conversation.

"I would give a good deal to know what they are talking about," muttered Hendricks. "I was a fool to trust the fellow; but I have confidence in some one, and only those of his class will be able to tell me where I can find the man I want."

It seemed to him they must be talking about him, for now and then the man who had alighted from the coupe made a motion in the direction of the cottage.

Hendricks could no longer remain a witness of a conversation he felt sure it was important that he should hear, and, profiting by the debris in the street, he wormed his way over to a short distance from where the pair was standing.

What was his anger and disappointment, when, just as he came within hearing distance, they suddenly turned about, went over to the coupe and entered it. A moment later it was clattering away along the uneven street, finally disappearing in the shadows.

Job shook his head and heaved a deep sigh as he started to return to his cottage, greatly disturbed by what he had seen.

"I wonder if there could be any other meaning to this than that the fellow had been put on my track by Ellison? And I thought I should be safe for a while—in peace. How I wish it was all over, my work done—and then rest." And, with the heavy steps of a heartsick and tired man, he entered the little place he hoped would have been a refuge, but might prove to be no more.

CHAPTER XVI.

AT POLICE HEADQUARTERS.

On the day following the incident of the black coupe, Superintendent Barnes, the chief of police, was seated in his office, studying a mass of written reports that lay before him on the desk. Evidently what he read was not to his liking, for his generally smooth forehead wore a deep frown and now and then he uttered an exclamation that showed his anger and disgust.

Inspector Barnes, as he was better known in the city, looked more like a prosperous banker than a man who had spent the principal part of his life in investigating the undercurrents of society. He did not wear that worn and worried look we are accustomed to associate with a man who has so much work laid out for him. He was none the less a capable officer, and if his smile was "child-like and bland," he was feared and respected by the lawless world, and justly so.

Barnes was not in good humor on the morning in question, and after he had finished his reading leaned back in the big chair and puffed for a moment on his black cigar, sending forth such clouds that he resembled a fat idol surrounded by incense. His glance fixed on the ceiling, it only changed to look now and then with a scowl at the pile of papers before him. Suddenly he leaned forward and rang the bell sharply at his elbow.

The folding door in the center of the room opened and his personal attendant appeared.

"Send Mac here at once!" he said, and lolled back in his chair again, smoking more vigorously than ever and engaged in deep thought. The attendant bowed himself out and a moment later the chief of detectives entered, and, closing the door behind him, advanced to the desk where his superior was seated.

He was a small man, looking not unlike an over-worked clerk, quick and nervous in his movements, with a long pale face and sharp eyes that almost glared from beneath bushy eyebrows.

"Want me, Super?" he asked, in a low voice. "Mac," was a man not given to eloquence or long speeches. "I am thinking that this department—yours, mine, everybody's, is in a bad state," said the chief.

"Ah," but the little man's face was unmoved.

"Look at that stack of reports there," exclaimed the other, pointing to his desk. "Mostly made up of the hopeless attempts to find the fellow who is at the head of most of the robberies that have been committed in the city during the past year. And not one of our people has been able to get even a clue to his whereabouts. Now, that fellow must be caught or the department will stand forever disgraced. Never since I have been connected with the force have we been confronted with so many failures. Why, if things go on this way you and I will have to get out, that's all."

"I'm sure I wish it was different," sighed Mac, shifting nervously from one foot to the other. "After all, it may not be the work of one man. You know a thief gets a reputation, and then every other crime of note is set down to his credit, or discredit. Just like in our own business. We often get credit in the papers for unearthing a criminal, when it may be, like as not, entirely the work of one of our men."

Inspector Barnes looked at his companion to see if there was any personal insinuation intended, but the little man was busy cying the glass case containing criminal curiosities.

"Well, if these robberies are not the work of the same man, why don't you catch the ones who are guilty," he said, in a voice of exasperation. "I tell you I still believe there is one behind it all, for these affairs bear the same stamp. It is, of course, possible that some one else has copied his methods. Whoever he is, he is a clever man, and we have not heard of the like since the days of George Leonidas Leslie. If I were not sure that Leslie was very dusty, I should believe that he had a hand in these matters. Now, Mac, why don't you catch him?"

"Why, indeed?" with a smile. "Why don't I capture a rainbow to make ribbons out of it for my wife? I tell you, Super, we are doing all we can. We have had some men who work for him in hand, but, though industriously pumped, they know little more about him than we do. To call the man a 'shadow' is wrong, for he never stays as long as a shadow in one place. But I have an idea."

"You are fortunate—so early in the morning."

"It is this, that the head of these affairs is not to be found in the underworld, but higher up. For all we know, one who passes as a gentleman."

"That I have thought of myself," said the chief, thoughtfully. "Perhaps we have been working in the wrong direction all along. Well, I can only urge you to do your best, or we shall find ourselves disliked by the press and the public and in general disrepute."

"I'll try a new tack," and the detective brought his teeth together with a snap. Don't think I haven't worked hard over this cursed affair. It worries me quite as much as it does you," but the chief did not seem to be listening, was leaning back in his chair as if half asleep, and the other, seeing him so preoccupied, took the opportunity to slip out of the room.

The closing of the door roused the chief from his reverie, for he sat up and looked around as if wondering to find himself alone. Just then a timid tap sounded on the door and the attendant entered.

"Well, what do you want?" asked the chief.

"There's a heavy swell outside who says he thinks he has news of importance, 'bout this last robbery on de aveny."

"Some other fool—erank, I suppose, to take up my time," growled Barnes; then, settling back in his chair, with an air of resignation, "well, tell him to come in."

The visitor tripped in gayly, as if bent on a pleasure mission. He was rather overdressed and wore a gardenia in his lapel. His face was smiling, but Barnes in an ill-humor frowned that down.

"You have some information—be brief. Sit down," motioning toward a chair. The visitor dropped into the seat.

"Inspector Barnes, I believe you are aware that a man known under the sobriquet of Will o' the Wisp recently escaped, with others, from the Auburn prison."

Barnes nodded stiffly. "I have reason to know that he is still in this city. That he arrived here a few days ago."

"Are you sure of that?" eying his visitor keenly. "Our men have been looking for him, but I had no news of his whereabouts."

"Well, you see an amateur sometimes can beat a professional."

"But how do you know you have seen the man—do you know him personally?"

"Well, hardly, not being in the habit of associating with such people," with a laugh.

"Explain yourself."

"I need not go into details—in fact, I prefer not to. This man, it happens, called on us some time ago. He holds a paper—a document, which, if made public, would do a great injury to our family. Now, he could only have got hold of this paper through a fellow-prisoner—one Martin Frale—to whom it was confided many years ago."

"I see. Frale was the man who was killed when a crowd of them escaped from Auburn," and the chief examined a paper which he drew from one of the pigeon-holes above his desk. "This Frale and Will, it seems, had struck up a great friendship in prison. Frale, I learn, saved his life from the assault of another man when they were working in the shoe shop. Since that time they were like brothers. It's rather a pity that this Frale was shot; because, you see, he had but a short time more to serve, if he had not attempted to escape." He replaced the paper in his desk, and looked to his visitor as if waiting for him to speak.

"By the way, you have not told me your name," as the other maintained silence.

"To be sure, I forgot that. Of course, I don't want to appear conspicuously in the matter."

"You need not."

"My name is Frank Ellison."

"And you think that perhaps this escaped prisoner may be the head of these recent robberies. The supposition is not a bad one, for when he was at large he conducted some pretty clever jobs."

He took a memorandum pad from his desk, and dipped his pen into the ink, at the same time assuming an attitude of attention.

"Now, then, where is this place where our man can be found?"

"There are reasons why I cannot tell you as yet," said Ellison.

The chief dropped his pen on the desk angrily.

"Did you come here to have fun with the department?"

"Nothing of the kind." And the visitor looked anxiously toward the door.

"Then explain yourself, and briefly."

"I must arrange a meeting with this man—if I can."

"What for?" snapped Barnes.

"It must be part of our bargain. I first of all wish to secure possession of this document. It would injure us if this fellow should be arrested and that paper in his hands. He would make it public, and that would be a poor reward for what I intend to do."

Barnes examined his visitor from head to foot carefully. For all the flippant, foppish air of the man, he felt when he looked into his eyes that he was far from being the weak character he appeared to be. That he was a man of strong passions and impulses, and not inclined to be over-scrupulous.

"So you want to make a bargain with the police, eh?"

"You can put it in that light, if you please," replied Ellison, calmly.

"And if we refuse—"

"Why, then, you will have to find the man for yourself, that is all," and the other laughed, despite the superintendent's frowning face.

"What is the paper you wish to secure—you can speak to me in perfect confidence," said Barnes.

"I cannot tell you that."

"But if I demand that you tell me," for there was something about the manner of the man before him that roused his anger, and he was in a bad humor, anyway, that day.

"My answer would be the same," said Ellison, and as he said this he rose.

"Where are you going?" demanded the chief.

"Naturally. I was going home, since we cannot come to an arrangement."

"Who said we could not?" grumbling. "I merely wanted to find out all I could about the matter. Well, now, I must leave you to arrange a meeting with this fellow," and he made a grimace as if he did not like to think that the direction of the capture was to be taken out of his hands.

"Yes, I hope to perfect my arrangements so that he can be nabbed in a couple of days. When everything is fixed beyond the possibility of failure you shall hear from me."

"How very kind." The superintendent was talking to himself. Then, in a louder voice. "Well, I shall count on you. How do you mean to go about it? You know he is apt to show a vigorous fight. You will need help."

"I well know the desperate nature of the man from reputation. I shall ask you to post your men in the street. When I fire a pistol you can rush in. But the details can be arranged later. Now, it is too early in the day to think of anything."

"I shall be anxious until I hear from you," said the chief.

"For reasons it is unnecessary to mention I am quite as anxious as you that the affair should be terminated," and Ellison bowed and left the office.

"The deuce!" he exclaimed when he found himself in the street. "How Barnes did glare at me at times. I wonder if I have done well to put my head in the lion's mouth? Bah! the race is to the swift!" and with a careless laugh he went his way.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE FACE IN THE HEDGE.

James Ellison stood before an open safe built in the wall of the study in his city house. He was examining its contents, and occasionally comparing what he found with a list written down in a little book he held in one hand. Now and then he sighed, while a worried look came over his face. Suddenly at the sound of a door being opened he closed the safe hurriedly and turned the knob. "Oh, it's you, is it?" with a weary air, as his brother entered the room looking light-hearted and debonaire. He went back to his seat by the desk, and sat there with his head resting on one hand in an attitude of deep dejection.

"Yes, it's only me," replied the brother. "Why, you started, Jimmy, when I came in, as if you had been a burglar surprised in the act of rifling that safe."

"You have an unpleasant way of plunging in on people when you are not expected—"

"Or wanted," continued the other, with a malicious smile, as he flung himself down into a chair and lit a cigarette.

"I thought I had locked the door; I was busy with accounts."

"Preparing to give an account of your stewardship, I suppose," and Frank, watching his brother's face, saw a faint flush gather at the words.

"That is my own concern," he said, testily. "I hope you did not come here to be quarrelsome. You know we never could get along well together."

"That was not my fault, for I am naturally of a mild disposition," replied the other, with mock earnestness.

"You happened to marry a fortune, and then became so airy that it was no longer possible for us to pull together in harness. Now, as I said before, I am glad to see that you are preparing to give an account of your stewardship." James looked at his brother in surprise.

"I don't know what you are driving at, nor do I see what possible business it is of yours."

"A great deal my business. Your daughter, when she marries, will, naturally, want the bulk of the fortune. Well, as I intend to marry her, I am interested that my wife should receive her fortune intact."

[To Be Continued.]

THE HANDSOME THING.

An Old "Tichtwad's" Noye's Proposition Which He Considered Somewhat Philanthropic.

The story is told of a Cape Cod man who was a thrifty soul, even accounted a trifle "near" by those who knew him well, but who always declared that he was "pinched" for money, and so could not afford to be generous, relates Youth's Companion.

When the summer residents of the town had raised money for a library, the committee selected as the best site for the proposed building, a corner lot owned by the thrifty man. When he was asked to name his price, he said, "Considerin' the object, he was willin' to let the land go for nine hundred dollars."

The committee were aghast; no body had dreamed that he would even set such a value on the small lot of land.

"Can't you make any reduction to help us out?" asked one of the young men, trying to subdue his indignation and be polite.

"Well, no," said the land owner, slowly. "I reckon I can't put the figure any lower, seein' how pinched I am jest now. But I tell you what I will do for ye. You pay me a thousand dollars for the land, and I'll contribute an even hundred to the lib'ry fund. I'd jest as soon put it down in writin' if you'd like to have me, and though I don't set up to be one of these philanthropists, I call that a pooty handsome offer!"

An Untimely Quotation.

Some years ago a Philadelphia preacher inaugurated in his Sunday school the practice of having the children quote some scripture text as they dropped their pennies into the contribution box. On the first Sunday in question, a little shaver walked up and said: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and in dropped his penny. "Charity shall cover a multitude of sins," and in dropped the next. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," quoted the third, and so on. Just then up walked a little fellow with the unmistakable remnants of molasses candy on his chubby face, and, as he dropped his cent, he bawled out: "A fool and his money are soon parted."—Albany Argus.

A New Guinea's Idea of Smoking.

The natives of New Guinea hold tenaciously to their customs, and though they regard the white man as a being of wonderful powers and almost superhuman in his ingenuity, they will very seldom acknowledge that his practice in any particular matter is right, and the native way wrong. Accordingly, one of the Anglican Mission staff was surprised not long ago when a husband said: "White women do not smoke (literally eat) tobacco; I wish New Guinea women would follow their example!" But it rather spoiled the sentiment when he added: "Then there would be more tobacco for the men."—Missionary Review.

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has some female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing a child involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmly. She cannot help it, as her condition is due to suffering and shattered nerves caused by some derangement of the uterine system with backache, headache, and all kinds of pain, and she is on the verge of nervous prostration.

When a mother finds that she cannot be calm and quiet with her children, she may be sure that her condition needs attention, and she cannot do better than to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This medicine will build up her system, strengthen her nerves, and enable her to calmly handle a disobedient child without a scene. The children will soon realize the difference, and seeing their mother quiet, will themselves become quiet.

Mrs. May Brown, of Chicago, Ill., says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—'Honor to whom honor is due,' and you deserve both the thanks and honor of the mothers of America whom you have so blessedly helped and benefited. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I would feel run-down, nervous and irritable, or have any of the aches and pains which but few women escape, and I have found that it relieved me at once and gave me new strength. Several ladies, members of our Literary Union, speak in the highest praise of your Vegetable Compound, as they have been cured from serious female troubles. One lady, who thought she must submit to an operation, was cured without using anything in the world but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. You have hosts of friends in Chicago, and if you came to visit our city we would delight to do you honor. Gratefully yours,—Mrs. MAY BROWN, 57 Grant Place, Chicago, Ill.

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Mrs. McKinny.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and let you know the good you and your Vegetable Compound are doing. I had been sick ever since my first baby was born, and at the birth of my second, my doctor, as well as myself thought I should never live through it. After that menstruation never came regular, and when it came I suffered terribly. I also had womb and ovarian trouble. A friend of my husband's advised him to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me. At first I had no faith in it, but now nothing could induce me to be without it. Menstruation has become regular, and I feel like a new woman. Your medicine is a God-send to suffering women. I hope this letter will lead others to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours truly, Mrs. MILDRED MCKINNY, 28 Pearl St., San Francisco, Cal." excellent linings—and good all over—the "old reli-

BEGIN WORK.—Work will be begun on the new Elks' Home building, where the Chas. Stevens grocery now stands, on Main and Bank Row, about the first of January. When completed, it will be one of the handsomest homes in the State.

LAND RENTED.—Auctioneer Forsyth rented publicly on Saturday, for Ed. Turner, agent for Col. R. T. Ford's heirs, 1,504 acres of land to Earl Ferguson, for $7,550. It is understood that A. S. Thompson gets 511 acres lying on the Clintonville turnpike.

TICK-TACKING.—Some of the young boys have been having a big time tick-tacking different residences in town at night. This practice should be stopped, as some one may be mistaken for a burglar some time and probably get hurt. It is a dangerous practice.

THIRTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.—The Cynthiana Democrat has recently celebrated its thirty-fifth anniversary. The paper, which is one of the very best that finds its place on our exchange table, is most ably edited by that gifted and most popular young newspaper man, James M. Allen, who by the way, is a native born Parisian. Success to the Democrat, and may it "live long and prosper."

Died Suddenly.

Denis Mernaugh, who was a brother of the late Jas. Mernaugh, and aged about 66 years, was found dead in his boarding house, Mrs. Earlywine's, on Friday afternoon last at 5 o'clock. He was a bricklayer by trade and was well known. He is survived by one brother, Peter Mernaugh, of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Fannie McGee, of Covington. The coroner's inquest found death due to the excessive use of alcohol.

The funeral was held from the residence of his brother, Peter Mernaugh, on Sunday afternoon, the services being conducted by Rev. F. J. Cheek, and the burial was in the Paris cemetery.

Improvements.

The following building permits have been granted by the City Council: J. S. Wilson, stable on Mt. Airy; J. S. Wilson, three story frame warehouse, corner Winchester street and Gorey avenue; W. H. Wood, cottage on Lilliston avenue; Matthew Ewing, cottage on Lilliston avenue; Mrs. Marie Price, wareroom on Pleasant street; S. E. Borland, wareroom on Pleasant street; Belle Taylor, stable on Lilliston avenue; Geo. Burton, stable on Williams street; M. S. M. Wilmoth, two story frame residence on Houston avenue; Mrs. Rachel Ashbrook, two story addition to her residence on High street; L. S. Redmond, ten room residence in Thornton addition.

The permit of Mrs. Nellie Highland to build an iron-clad two story stable on Pleasant street was referred to the improvement committee.

A Pyrotechnical Display.

The citizens of Paris were treated to a magnificent pyrotechnical display in the heavens on Saturday night at about 6:45 o'clock, when a very large meteor was seen to shoot across the horizon and to fall to the earth below. It was a most brilliant sight, lighting the heavens for a few seconds in a most dazzling manner. It is hard to tell just where the meteor fell, as various ones say that it dropped at different places. Its direction was southwesterly, making an angle of about 70 degrees with the horizontal. It was a wonderful sight and will long be remembered by those who were fortunate in witnessing the strange phenomenon.

The City Council Meeting.

After the reading of the minutes of the preceding meeting, their adoption was objected to by Mr. Parrish, and he gave the following reasons: That the granting of the franchise to the Bluegrass Traction Company was not advertised and let to the highest bidder, as required by law; that a perpetual franchise was granted, when the law only gives the Council the right to grant one for 20 years; that Councilman Ashbrook voted for the franchise, when he had no right to do so, as he is secretary of the Electric Light Company, and had in his pocket at the time he voted, a proposition to sell the Electric Light plant to the Traction Co. A vote on the adoption of the minutes resulted: Yes, O'Brien and Woods, No, Parrish and Hinton. Mayor Perry voted yes, and the minutes were adopted.

The suit brought by the city against the Water Company was withdrawn. The company agrees to improve its plant in accordance with the contract with the city.

Divorce Suits.

The largest docket known for years in petitions for divorce suits, will come up at the next term of the Circuit Court, which meets next week. Below is the list in full:

Jennie Allen vs. William Allen.
Betty Baker vs. John Baker.
Carrie W. Haley vs. Alonzo Haley.
Sallie Bedford Hedges vs. Joseph H. Hedges.

Lucy Turney Tucker vs. Robert C. Tucker.
H. W. Waller vs. Minnie Waller.
Nellie Stoker Highland vs. Scotland G. Highland.
Sarah Cantrill vs. John Cantrill.
Walter Zimmerman vs. Nora Zimmerman.
Mattie H. Davis vs. Moses Davis.

Now, Will You Be Good?

The following letter, which was written by one farmer to another, in this county, has fallen into the hands of the News man, and we cannot refrain from giving it publication:

"Sir: Your fowls cleaned up my oats field, cut corn in two fields, two hog pens, and two wheat fields, tearing up the grass. Have sent you word several times to please keep them out a few days. If I have to fatten them for market, please let me know at once, so I can get cheaper ration than wheat at $1 and grass-seed at $5.

You told me the reason you failed to do what you agreed to in building the fence was that I did not send you word in the night, that if I had any business with you to come in the night, now if I go running around at night, Granny won't have any one to help her hold the house down. Please take the barbed wire off the fence and fix the other or take it loose from my post, and oblige."

Most Likely Untrue.

The daily papers of last Friday contained a dispatch from Alpena, Mich., stating that Mr. Catesby Woodford, of this city, had had trouble with a man named Simmons, of Montgomery county, in that State, and that Mr. Woodford knocked him down with his gun and kicked him into insensibility. The article created considerable anxiety here at the home of Mr. Woodford, as no communication could be had from him, owing to the fact that he was forty miles from any railway station. It was thought at the time, that the report had been very much exaggerated and was highly colored by the reporter for the daily press.

Mr. Buckner Woodford, a brother of Catesby, received two letters yesterday from him, stating that he was having a royal good time, getting lots of game of all kinds, fish, deer, pheasants, &c. The letters were written last Friday, and there was no allusion made in them to his having any trouble of any kind.

TELL THE GOOD.

Had I the gift of tongues, a Shakespeare's pen,
A seraph's voice to make Heav'n ring
again,
I could not tell the good I've found in men;
Their kind deeds have been numberless;
yet still
I find myself sometimes recounting ill!

Had I the harp of Orpheus; a command
Of all the languages men understand,
The kind acts that I see on every hand
I could not even catalogue; yet still Sometimes, forgetting this, I name the ill!

A thousand thoughts come flocking to my mind
Out of the misty past that lies behind—
Recalling human kindness; yet so blind
Sometimes are human eyes, I murmur still,
Forgetting good, remem'ring only ill!

The Heav'n I hope for is a lightsome place
Where smiles aye cling to every angel face;
Where, through eternity—and endless space—
Ten million million tongues shall ne'er be still,
Always recounting good, forgetting ill!

—Los Angeles Herald.

A PIANO THAT LAUGHED.

By CLAUDIA MAY FERRIN.

NO ONE could play upon it—that is, no one whose nerves were very sensitive or whose horrors of the uncanny or the inexplicable were in the ascendency. A magnificent piece of workmanship it was, to be sure, famous since completion for its sweet tone and its wide compass of expression. Yet it stood there in Mr. Briggs' parlor ready to indulge in mocking laughter at whosoever should dare to seek its music.

The laughter in itself was sufficient to unnerve even the most courageous scouter at the possibilities of ghost-dom. It was a harsh, grating "Ho, ha ha!"—such as a merry-making bedlam will give vent to, and with a little occasion for utterance. The longer anyone played the louder the laughter became, until even the boldest would clasp his hands to his ears and arise in nervous haste. Another strange thing was that it did not begin until the performer touched the note G, continuing until he ceased playing, whether that note was sounded again or not. It stopped as soon as the last chord died away, which caused more than one to gaze back at the instrument in shame-faced confusion.

"What shall we do with it?" said Mrs. Briggs, helplessly, after a final effort to play upon it without heeding its ridicule.

"Sell it," replied her husband, promptly.

"No, no, no!" she cried. "Father made me promise upon my knees that I'd never part with it. Besides, who'd want it? I must have a piano that I can play upon, for I cannot live without music."

"Well, then, I'll send an expert to examine it—what say you?"

"Send him, of course. But what good can he do? The laughter was not heard until after father died, and you know that the letter G was his initial—G for Gottlieb."

"It is a strange coincidence, to be sure. But G may also stand for Gretna," said the practical Mr. Briggs.

"Let's see what the pianomaker will discover before we worry further. Then if he cannot remedy the trouble I'll get you a new one."

The next day the expert came, taking apart the beautiful instrument and minutely inspecting every detail in its make-up. To their dismay he discovered nothing out of the ordinary, informing them instead that it was the best made instrument he had ever examined. His efforts proved a failure, obviously; for as soon as he had put it together again it stood ready to emit that blood-curdling laughter in the face of any and every performer.

The instrument was made in Germany by the father of the cultured Mrs. Briggs. Gottlieb Vandofen had been one of the leading manufacturers of pianos in Berlin, also owning large manufacturing interests in Paris and London. He was reputed as fabulously wealthy, yet at his death the entire bulk of his fortune did not exceed $3,000,000 in American money. This was divided between his daughter, Mrs. Briggs, and his son, Karl Vandofen. A sense of disappointment was experienced by the former, though she tried to persuade herself that she had known so little about her father's business affairs that perhaps she had overestimated his financial worth.

The son was absent in Australia and its neighboring islands when the father was attacked with his final illness, failing to receive the letter bearing the news of his approaching demise. Three months previously he had gone thither, led by his roving disposition and the desire to see that part of the world. The two had had a lengthy conversation previous to Karl's departure, but Gretna had not learned the purport of it, neither did she let it concern her very much. She knew that her father and brother were upon the best of terms.

Two months after Gottlieb Vandofen's death his daughter Gretna was married to Augustus Briggs, an American professor who had gone to Germany to study the language. This seemingly hasty marriage was but in accordance with the father's request, for he knew that his daughter's interests would be safe in the hands of that gentleman. As soon as the business could be adjusted, the happy pair sailed for America, expecting Karl to reappear upon the scene at any day to take charge of affairs there at Berlin.

But he did not come, and, unknown to them, was anxiously awaiting word from the beloved fatherland. Finally he wrote his sister a letter of inquiry as to her silence, which reached her a few days after her arrival in America. Three months more passed, and at the time of the final struggle with the mysterious piano Mrs. Briggs was daily expecting another missive from her wandering brother.

The letter failed to come; but the brother arrived in its stead. Sun-burned, weary, and heartily satisfied to refrain thereafter from his long, aimless journeys, he appeared at her door one morning, to be welcomed as none but a sister can welcome.

Explanations over, he began to glance casually about the room, and immediately his eyes fell upon the new piano.

"What's this for?" he queried. "Where's father's piano?"

"It's haunted," replied Mrs. Briggs, with subdued voice.

"Haunted? Tut, tut!" And without further comment he seated himself at the familiar old instrument at the opposite side of the room. Eagerly he struck the central note E, then listened intently. Next the note F, and listened again. Lastly the note G; and as the laughter began its weird reverberations he turned to his sister with a smile of triumph.

"Haunted, is it?" he cried, exultantly. "No, no, Gretna. That's just what I was hoping for. Come, sit down, and I'll tell you all about it."

Leading her to a divan near by, he seated himself beside her, and began to explain carefully the hitherto unfathomed mystery.

"When I was about to leave on this last trip, you remember, father called me to him and we had a long conversation. That morning he told me for the first time the exact amount of his fortune—about $10,000,000 in American money—and gave me a working knowledge of his three establishments. He had long been thinking of selling his interest in the factories at Paris and London, but was not yet ready to close negotiations. Whenever he did so, that would necessitate the handling of large sums of money, and he was then at a loss to know just which city—whether London, Paris, or Berlin—to deposit the bulk of his fortune in. He expressed the fear that you could not manage affairs, as you had never handled money except to spend it. I read his thoughts and offered to give up my trip, but he would not consent to that. Instead, he exacted a promise from me that when I should return this time I would remain at home and devote myself to business."

"Well, when he had explained everything so thoroughly that I knew just what was depending upon me, he then told me that he was afraid to leave his fortune all in one bank, and that he intended to divide it into two sums. The smaller amount he would leave in the bank with which our family has always done business; the other—and now comes the secret of the piano."

"You know as well as I that father did every bit of the work on this instrument except, perhaps, the carving. He spared neither pains nor expense in building it, for it was to be a family treasure so long as an atom of it remained. Well, that morning he took me to it and removed a part of the case, showing me that the rear of the musical framework was double, with space enough between the boards to admit one's hand. In that space is a peculiar bit of mechanism of father's own devising, which he termed a laughing-jack. It can be connected with the musical apparatus by means of a very slender wire, which is brought around past the sounding board in such a way that no one can find it unless he knows beforehand just where to look for it."

"To show me how it worked he attached the wire to the hammer-shank of a string near the center of the instrument, and struck that note with his finger. At once the laughter began, just as it will do now. He played a strain or two, and the thing kept laughing as long as the piano continued to sound. This amused me so that I laughed in earnest. He feared that you might hear us, so he released the hammer-shank from the secret wire."

"He then told me that he was thinking seriously of depositing his money in a bank in a foreign country, so that the lawyers and sharpers would not be so apt to discover it and perhaps purloin part of it in case I should not be at home. He mentioned England and France, because of his factories being at the capital of each country. I sanctioned the suggestion, whereupon he explained to me that if he deposited his money in England, at London, he would attach the laughing-jack to the note E, by which I should know that a letter of introduction to the cashier of the Bank of England was secreted in this recess, at the back of the piano. If he left the money in Paris he would attach the wire to the note F, meaning France; if in our home city, to the note G, signifying Germany. Of course, when he gave me those instructions he took it for granted that I would get word immediately if he should die ere I returned, so that you would not need to be alarmed by the laughing-jack's merriment. He said further that if he should die so suddenly that he could not attend to this matter, then I must look for the letter in the secret recess in his desk at home, with which you also are familiar. I searched for it there as soon as I reached home, but finding nothing, I concluded that you had either taken it or that it was in the piano."

"I found nothing of importance," returned the sister. "There was no letter there, at any rate—nothing but some old bills and about 50 marks in money."

"Then I'll inspect the piano."

With that Karl Vandofen arose and moved the instrument to a lighter part of the room. In a very few moments he had taken away a portion of the casing, and his first act was to show his sister the threadlike wire attached to the base of one of the hammer-shanks, the prime cause of all that hideous laughter. With a small stool which he had brought for the purpose he unwound the middle G note of the keyboard to prove to her that the enchantment was gone.

He next gave his attention to the double back of the instrument, disclosing the unusual bit of space to which he had alluded, with its queer piece of mechanism within—the laughing-jack. Near the latter was a carefully sealed envelope, addressed to Karl in scrawling hand and lettered in faultless German—the father's special legacy to his son and daughter.

With trembling hand Karl opened it, to find therein the following message, also in German:

Thus the magnificent piano delivered its message, which touched a tender spot in the heart of each recipient. Nothing was left them but to obey, with Karl as principal actor in the drama.

A few months later the wishes expressed in the letter were all fulfilled save one. And Karl had taken the initial step towards its consummation, having begun to pay attention to a buxom little lass in Berlin with a view to installing her finally as mistress of the Vandofen mansion.—New York Times.

HE MADE IT PLAIN.

Not Exactly a Case of Gratitude Nor Yet One of Utter Unthankfulness.

A gentleman whose liberality in no way corresponded to his means found out one day that there was some ale in his cellar almost spilling, and decided to get rid of it without delay, relates the New Yorker.

The next morning when he was rambling over his estate he came across a party of workmen. Addressing the man in charge, he ostentatiously presented the ale to the men, and said they could go and fetch it as they liked.

A few days afterward he happened to meet the foreman again, and immediately proceeded to extract from him in some way a suitable acknowledgment of the bounty recently bestowed.

"Well, Williams," said the donor, with the air of a man who had granted an unspeakable favor, "did you and your men have that ale?"

"Oh, yes sir, thank you, we had it," was the reply.

"That's right, and how did you like it?" said the gentleman, desiring a warmer expression of gratitude.

"Oh, sir, it was just the thing for us," was the rather vague response.

"Ha, that'll do then. But what do you mean by 'just the thing'?"

"Well, sir," said Williams, "if it 'ad been a little better we shouldn't 'ad it, and if it 'ad been a little worse we couldn't 'ad a drinked it."

Making Matters Worse.

A philanthropic lady visited the asylum at Kingston, Ont., not long ago and displayed great interest in the inmates. One old man particularly gained her compassion.

"And how long have you been here my man?" she inquired.

"Twelve years," was the answer. "Do they treat you well?"

"Yes." "Do they feed you well?"

"Yes." After addressing a few more questions to him, the visitor passed on. She noticed a broad and broadening smile on the face of her attendant, and on asking the cause heard with consternation that the old man was none other than Dr. Clark, the superintendent.

She hurried back to make apologies. How successful she was may be gathered from these words: "I am very sorry, Dr. Clark. I will never be governed by appearances again."—Brooklyn Life.

A Perfect Match.

A young man of foppish appearance walked languidly into a department store and sought the necktie counter. When he had attracted the attention of the salesgirl he opened to their widest extent a pair of unattractive eyes, and said:

"I wish to buy a half dozen ties of a color that will match my eyes. Have you any?"

The clerk gave him a casual glance, and then, turning to the shelves behind the counter, she took down a flat box, removed the cover and laid the open box before her customer. In it lay half a dozen ties of the palest blue, edged with pink—Youth's Companion.

CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.

The Remarkable Experience of a Prominent Statesman—Congress-

a High Endorsement.

Congressman Meekison of Ohio.

Hon. David Meekison is well known not only in his own State, but throughout America. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State. Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only un conquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last, Peruna came to the rescue. He writes:

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison, Member of Congress.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

GOVERNMENT ECONOMY.

President Roosevelt Decides That the Publication of Useless Documents Must Be Stopped.

President Roosevelt has called a halt on the practice of government departments of printing bulky reports on all manner of subjects. In Mr. Roosevelt's opinion there is altogether too much of this sort of thing, and he believes that a large part of the publications is composed of matter of no particular value to the government or the people of the United States. By his direction Secretary Cortelyou has sent the following letter to the head of every executive department:

"White House, Washington, D. C.—My Dear Sir: I am directed by the president to say that he desires some plan devised by which the present tendency to increase the number and size of printed reports and documents of all sorts may be curbed. He thinks there is much useless matter and a large number of unnecessary and expensive illustrations included in many of the reports and documents published; that many are issued at great expense which accomplish no practical good, and that there is too much public printing generally. The president will be glad to have you give this matter careful consideration.—George B. Cortelyou, Secretary to the President."

A VALUABLE WORK.

Nine Years of Scientific Literature Covered in Volumes Issued by Geological Survey.

A valuable work of reference to the publications of the North American geology, geology, paleontology, petrology and mineralogy covering the last nine years of the century, from 1892 to 1900, inclusive, has recently been issued by the United States geological survey as Bulletin Nos. 188 and 189. These books of reference contain a full list of the papers, numbering over 6,500, on the above subjects which have appeared during the period; they are taken from nearly 200 different American and foreign publications. The papers cover a wide range of subjects, and for convenience are classified both by topics and by the names of the authors. The compilation is the work of F. B. Weeks, of the geological survey.

FOSSIL CORALS DESCRIBED.

United States Geological Survey Preparing an Interesting Monograph.

The announcement is made that Mr. T. Wayland Vaughan, of the United States geological survey, who recently returned from southern Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia and Florida, where he has been making a study of the fossil corals found in the formations in those states, will embody the results of his researches in a monograph to be issued by the geological survey.

The completion of the work will require the greater part of the present year.

To Revive a Lost Art.

Kyrle Bellew has announced that Mrs. James Brown Potter will be in this country for the purpose of introducing "Cantellations," which has been declared a lost art, at least as far as the United States is concerned. "Cantellations" are recitations interspersed with intonations of music.

Has Been Hit.

An English critic complains of the "levity with which matters of the gravest importance are treated by the American papers." Some American paper, says the Chicago Record-Herald, has evidently had a paragraph or two about him.

THE TEST OF TIME.

Mrs. Clara J. Sherbourne, Professional Nurse of 237 Cumberland St., Portland, Maine, says:—

"I heartily wish those who suffer from some disturbed action of the kidneys would try Doan's Kidney Pills. They would, like me, be more than surprised. My back annoyed me for years. Physicians who diagnosed my case said it arose from my kidneys. When the grip was epidemic, I was worn out with constant nursing, and when I contracted it myself it left me in a very serious condition. I could not straighten nor do the most trivial act without being in torture. The kidneys were too active or the secretions were too copious, and I knew what was wrong, but how to right it was a mystery. It seems odd for a professional nurse, who has had a great deal of experience with medicines, to read advertisements about Doan's Kidney Pills in the newspapers, and it may appear more singular for me to go to H. H. Hay & Son's drug store for a box. But I did, however; and had anybody told me before that it was possible to get relief as quickly as I did I would have been loth to believe it. You can send anyone who wishes more minute particulars about my case to me, and I will be only too glad to tell them personally. As long as I live I will be a firm advocate of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Cure Confirmed 5 Years Later.

"Lapse of time has strengthened my good opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills, first expressed in the spring of 1896. I said then that had any body told me that it was possible to get relief as quickly as I did I would have been loth to believe it. Years have passed and my continued freedom from kidney complaint has strengthened my opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills and given me a much higher appreciation of their merits."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Sherbourne will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.
